Health Warnings

The Centers for Disease Control, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, state and local health departments, and other clinical and public health partners are investigating a national outbreak of e-cigarette, or vaping, product use associated lung injury (EVALI).

The Department of Public Health recommends that people refrain from the use of all e-cigarette, or vaping, products. E-cigarettes contain nicotine, an addictive drug.

E-cigarette aerosol can contain cancer-causing chemicals and other substances that harm the body.
