

"Viruses are exosomes, which are excretions of toxic cells. Exosomes are not transmittable. People are looking at exosomes and calling them viruses. The word virus comes from the ancient Latin which means noxious substance or poison. Exosomes are a response to illness, not the cause of illness. Exosomes facilitate healing by devouring toxic matter."

Dr. Andrew Kaufman, M.D.